Description

Under the RCMP's International Peace Operations Branch, Canadian police are serving on peace missions in a dozen countries around the world, training local police forces, trying to provide safety and stability to countries in chaos. A new contingent of Canadian police officers has just landed in Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere. There they will be faced with extreme poverty, heat and civil unrest.

Armed stand-offs, hostage situations, major takedowns ... These situations call for the specialized skills of the RCMP's Emergency Response Team (ERT), a group of highly-trained RCMP members who use specialized weapons, equipment, and tactics to resolve extremely high-risk situations. From boarding vessels in the Pacific Ocean at high speeds to hostage rescue operations in a remote part of Manitoba, this is only a glimpse of what ERT does on a daily basis.
