TV "Courage in Red", documentary on the RCMP coming to OLN

Just stumbled upon news article on the RCMP's main website. Called Courage in Red, the series (a documentary) focuses on the training and daily life of members within the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

It's rather startling. The RCMP tend to shy away from the media, and have historically co-operated poorly with any form of "mass media", i.e. television series. They participated in To Serve and Protect for a bit, but even then stopped participating after a few short years.

But this is kind of neat, and is a good opportunity for the Force. They need to start focusing on what makes them unique, and why they are such a special police force.

The series airs Sunday November 1st at 10:00 PM EST. A few clips (all available in HD).

All looks rather interesting. I'm interested to see what their take on it is. I'm not really interested in anything too dramatic, you know? On the other hand, the RCMP could benefit from some good PR, and this is one way of doing it.
